We are concerned to see a further proposal too relocate staff accommodation away from the hotel into a formerly quiet residential area. If young staff wish to have a late night party and are located on the hotel premises they will be aware that their management is nearby who will keep their activities under control so as not to disturb their guests. However, it is clear that if the same staff are located far from their management no such restraint can exist and they will simply disturb local residents and holiday visitors who have no such redress.

We operate Morva as holiday let and our visitors come there year after year because of its quiet and tranquil location. We are concerned that the use of Treboeth, a mere 50 yards away, as staff accommodation will destroy this tranquillity.
