Hi,

I am writing to let you know I think the new Thai food van on Holgates Green is a great idea.

Having just spent a month on the island myself I understand that food venues on st Mary's are running low. Due to either everywhere being booked up months in advance or staffing issues, having a good meal out on st Mary's is a rarity now. We had a lovely time on Scilly but the one downfall was there was not enough places to eat.

Having another food take away van is a great idea. The location is also great having lots of bins near by. Also toilets and plenty of benches to enjoy the food on with a nice view. This location is also good as if one take away van is too busy it's not too far to go to another one. It will also get good business as it's on show and not tucked away somewhere.

The food is also lovely and reasonably priced.

During the time it was open whilst I was there i always saw people waiting to get food from there so it is already proving popular.

There used to be a majorly popular burger van which was another great addition to the food vans, this unfortunately had to shut down. The galley is no longer a restaurant, Juliet's no longer serve food in the evenings, On The Quay, The Beach and Dibble and Grub are booked up most evenings at all times. So you are only left with pub food or the 2 take away vans. So to lose another food business would be disappointing.

We hope that more food vendors will be welcomed otherwise it will put others off trying out new businesses and the food situation is already poor.

Thanks
Jess Burns
